

Vice President for Development and Alumni Engagement

Franklin College, a selective, residential, liberal arts college in the Indianapolis metropolitan area, seeks an experienced professional to lead all aspects of development including capital campaigns, planned and major giving, annual giving, alumni relations and stewardship. Franklin College has an endowment of approximately $80 million and has completed successful capital campaigns. The college is in the last stages of the Campaign for the Sciences to renovate and expand an historic science center into a state-of-the-art science facility.

The vice president for development and alumni engagement joins Franklin College at an exciting time in our history. The leadership and energy from a recently-appointed president with a development background, Thomas J. Minar, Ph.D., the support from an engaged board of trustees, the vision for experiential learning, professions and health sciences within the context of a liberal arts institution, enthusiasm for a new strategic plan and a history of deep alumni engagement make this a distinctive opportunity for an entrepreneurial and strategic thinker, planner, and leader. 1,000 students and 75 faculty members enjoy a beautiful campus in a college town twenty miles from the heart of the vivacious eleventh largest city in the country. Major programs in the liberal arts and sciences are complemented by teacher education, journalism, business, and computer science, as well as a recently launched master's program in athletic training. Founded in 1834, Franklin was the first college in Indiana to admit women.
