

PHILOSOPHY

Philosophy major · Philosophy minor

Learn how to analyze the environments and people around you, study and apply ethical theories, develop thought-provoking, rational arguments and examine the nature of existence, reality and knowledge as you prepare to apply a collection of philosophical skills to any number of professional fields.

THE CLASSROOM EXPERIENCE

Philosophical theories and real-world applications

The Franklin College philosophy program equips students with the critical skills needed in any role or industry – an approach that serves philosophy majors well as they prepare to enter a workforce that’s in a constant state of change. While students explore logic, ethics, political theory, and some of the world’s most influential thinkers, they’re simultaneously honing a marketable set of core skills that they’ll carry with them for the rest of their lives, including:

- Sound, civil and intellectual argumentation
- Self-examination
- The application of ethics
- Understanding and empathizing with alternate perspectives
- Appreciating diversity of thought and values
- Creative thinking and problem solving
- Idea articulation, both written and verbal

100%

of our students
complete an internship or undergraduate research.

THE FRANKLIN COLLEGE PHILOSOPHY PROGRAM EQUIPS STUDENTS WITH THE CRITICAL SKILLS NEEDED IN ANY ROLE OR INDUSTRY, AN APPROACH THAT SERVES PHILOSOPHY MAJORS WELL AS THEY PREPARE TO ENTER A WORKFORCE THAT'S IN A CONSTANT STATE OF CHANGE.

The philosophy major culminates with a senior research project through which majors explore an area of personal and professional interest; past students have explored the ethics of prostitution, intersectionality, and whether demons can exist alongside God.

OUTSIDE THE CLASSROOM

Independent studies and internships

The philosophy program requirements are intentionally flexible to allow students to customize their learning path; while mastering the core concepts of the discipline, majors explore avenues of personal interest along the way. That customization manifests as independent studies through which students deeply examine self-identified topics like the ethics of serial killers, and moral responsibilities to refugee states. In addition to independent coursework, every philosophy major completes an internship during his or her college experience. Students have worked in a range of professional environments, including law firms, nonprofits, businesses and higher education institutions.

POST-GRADUATION

Unlimited career potential

While many disciplines narrow down students' career options, philosophy opens up nearly every door. Equipped with sharp critical thinking and problem solving skills, analytical prowess and a unique perspective on the world, philosophy majors have gone on to contribute to a breadth of professional fields, including:

- Business and marketing: Engineering, writing, analysis, human resources
- Medicine and human health: Psychology, health administration, neurology
- Secondary and higher education: Academia, high school teaching, counseling
- Government, law and nonprofits: Political science, economics, history, philanthropy

While most Franklin College philosophy majors go directly into the field upon graduation, some students choose to pursue advanced degrees in philosophy or law.

DEPARTMENT OVERVIEW

- Law school preparation: Philosophy majors consistently outperform most other majors on the Law School Admission Test (LSAT) and GRE General Test making this a prime major or minor for students who aspire to a career in law or go to graduate school.
- Double major: Many philosophy majors leverage the program's flexibility to double major in another discipline and cultivate a highly marketable and well-rounded skill set. Common supplementary majors include psychology, sociology, religious studies, English and business.
- Department contact information: Read more about the program at www.FranklinCollege.edu/philosophy or contact Instructor of Philosophy Nicole Dular, Ph.D., directly at 317.738.8271 or ndular@FranklinCollege.edu.