Instructor of Sociology

Franklin College invites applications for a one-year Instructor of Sociology appointment with possibility of renewal to begin in August of 2022. Responsibilities include teaching sociology courses, ranging from Introduction to Sociology to courses on Gender and Nonprofits as well as aiding with the professional development of students. An ability to teach qualitative methods, and sociological theory is also highly desired. Most vitally, Franklin College seeks applicants who love teaching sociology and teach well.

We provide a strong, active, and tailored liberal arts education through small class sizes and intentional relationships between students and their faculty mentors. Located about 20 miles from downtown Indianapolis, we support purposeful and practical academic experiences in and out of the classroom that leverage this location as students pursue personal, intellectual, and professional growth. This position is eligible for benefits. See www.FranklinCollege.edu for details.

Candidates should have a master’s degree in Sociology, but a Ph.D. in Sociology is preferred (ABD will be considered). Interdisciplinary degrees as well as those from related social science disciplines will also be considered. Candidates who can demonstrate excellence and dedication in teaching and a genuine interest in working with undergraduates in a small-college liberal arts setting will be given preference. We seek applications from individuals with an ability to contribute in meaningful ways to the college’s continuing commitment to diversity, especially those with demonstrated success in working with diverse populations.

Review of applications will begin December 1 and will continue until the position is filled. Applicants should submit a complete application including letter of application, vita, contact information for three references, teaching evaluations, and a statement of teaching via the application link – Franklin College Faculty Application.
