

Assistant Director of the Pulliam School of Journalism and Instructor of Journalism

Franklin College seeks a talented and effective educator, mentor, leader and storyteller to serve as the next assistant director of its award-winning Pulliam School of Journalism. This 12-month renewable position will begin August 2022. The successful candidate will be able to teach students at all levels of experience, help coordinate programs and educational initiatives that encourage hands-on, real-world learning by those students, assist in the management of an academic department with more than 100 students, provide support and aid in coordinating with fundraising efforts by the director and the college's development office and serve as a role model and mentor for both current students and recent alums. The successful candidate will also assist students with academic advising with the rest of the faculty. The job will most often be a 50/50 split between teaching and administrative duties, though that may shift depending on departmental needs.

The ideal candidate will be a team player, an excellent educator, a superb communicator, a seasoned storyteller comfortable working across media platforms and a hard worker. They will be the sort of person who sees obstacles as problems to solve, not as reasons to abandon worthy goals. Because this will be a joint faculty/administrative position, a master's degree or progress toward one is required. Experience in the journalism or communications profession or in higher education preferred.

We provide a strong, active, and tailored liberal arts education through small class sizes and intentional relationships between students and their faculty mentors. Located about 20 miles from downtown Indianapolis, we support purposeful and practical academic experiences in and out of the classroom that leverage this location as students pursue personal, intellectual and professional growth. Please see www.FranklinCollege.edu for more details.

Evaluation of applications will begin immediately and will continue until the position has been filled. Applicants should submit a complete application (electronic submissions preferred) including a cover letter, Curriculum Vita, transcripts, and contact information of three references via the application link: Franklin College Faculty Application
