Lecturer of Applied Human Physiology Science

The Department of Exercise Science at Franklin College invites applications for a Lecturer of Applied Human Physiology during the spring semesters, beginning Spring of 2024. This is a part-time, temporary position where the lecturer will deliver 200-level courses, with lectures occurring on Mondays, Tuesdays, and Thursdays and labs on Tuesdays and Thursday afternoons.

We provide a strong, active, and tailored liberal arts education through small class sizes and intentional relationships between students and their faculty mentors. Located about 20 miles from downtown Indianapolis, we support purposeful and practical academic experiences in and out of the classroom that leverage this location as students pursue personal, intellectual, and professional growth. Please see www.FranklinCollege.edu for more details.

The ideal candidate will demonstrate a talent for delivering a complex scientific subject in a creative and relevant manner to students within the exercise science department and have an understanding and appreciation for the liberal arts. In addition, the successful candidate must demonstrate best practices or high-impact practices in college pedagogy.

Candidates who can demonstrate a dedication to teaching, the ability to contribute in meaningful ways to the College’s continuing commitment to diversity, and a genuine interest in working with undergraduates in a small-college liberal arts setting will be given preference. A Master’s degree in kinesiology, exercise science, or other health-related field is required for candidates.

Evaluation of applications will begin immediately and will continue until the position is filled. Applicants should submit a complete application (electronic submissions preferred), including a letter of application, curriculum vita, transcripts, and a list of three references with contact information via the application link – Franklin College Faculty Application.
